1) 13 do 50 is a worldwide phenomenon

The per capita crime rates of immigrant/diaspora populations are near-identical to the crime rates of their non-diaspora ethnic/racial kin. For example, the crime rates of Africans in America, or Australia, or Europe very closely align with the crime rates of Africans in Africa. The same applies to every other racial group on the planet. In other words, ethnic and racial groups appear to be biologically inclined or predisposed towards a certain level of average criminality, regardless of circumstantial and environmental factors.

2) Interracial violence is mostly unidirectional

Whites are vastly over-represented as victims and vastly under-represented as perpetrators of interracial violent crime. The establishment’s claim that the Western world is suffering a pandemic of “white supremacist anti-brown violence” is not only a complete myth, but a polar inversion of reality.

What Every State in America Is Best—and Worst—At

Amanda Taylor | 5/19/2015

California

Best: Diversity — Considered a “minority majority” state (meaning there is no single ethnic group or race that makes up the majority of the population), California has earned the title of the most diverse state in the United States.

Worst: Quality of life — However, it was also accused of having the worst quality of life based on a variety of social and environmental factors including sense of community and air pollution. Maybe that’s why in recent years, more people have been leaving California than moving there...

Maine

Best: Lowest violent crime rate

Maine ranks as the safest state in the country, as there were just 124 violent crimes reported for every 100,000 residents -- less than a third of the national rate.

Worst: Least diverse

According to the latest Census data, 94.4 percent of Maine’s population is white, beating out nearby Vermont and New Hampshire as the least diverse states.

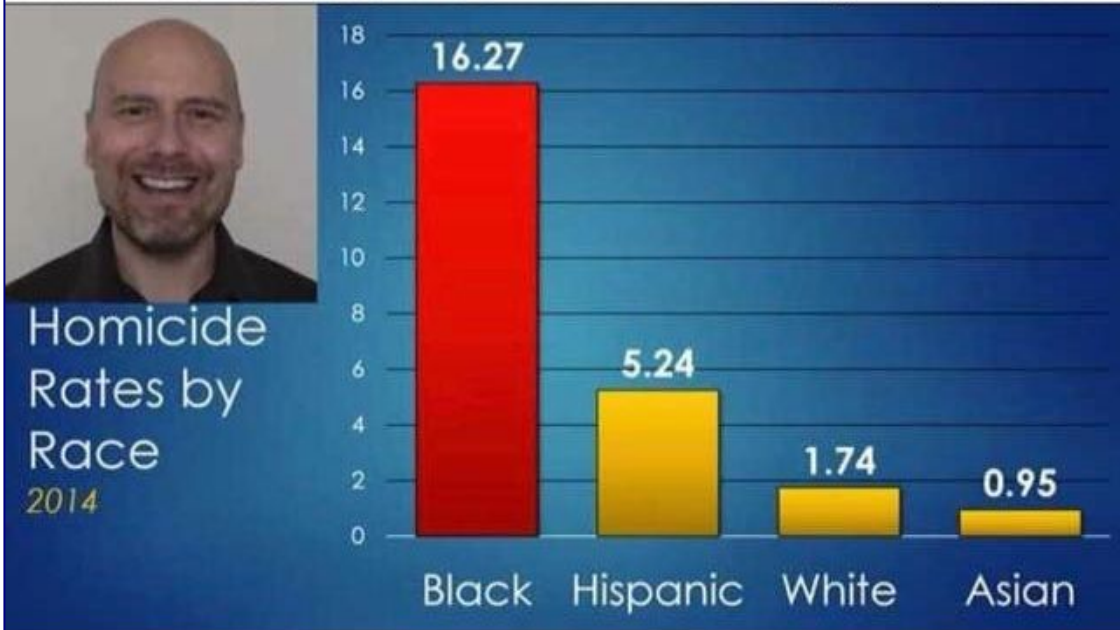

1960: US ~90% White

2018: US 50-60% White

In 2015, Brazil had more murders per year than the entirety of the countries highlighted in blue. This statistic is probably not applicable in 2020, due to the vast “diversification” of the countries marked in blue.

Homicide appears to increase after firearms are restricted. Potential evidence for the “guns = homicide deterrent” theory?

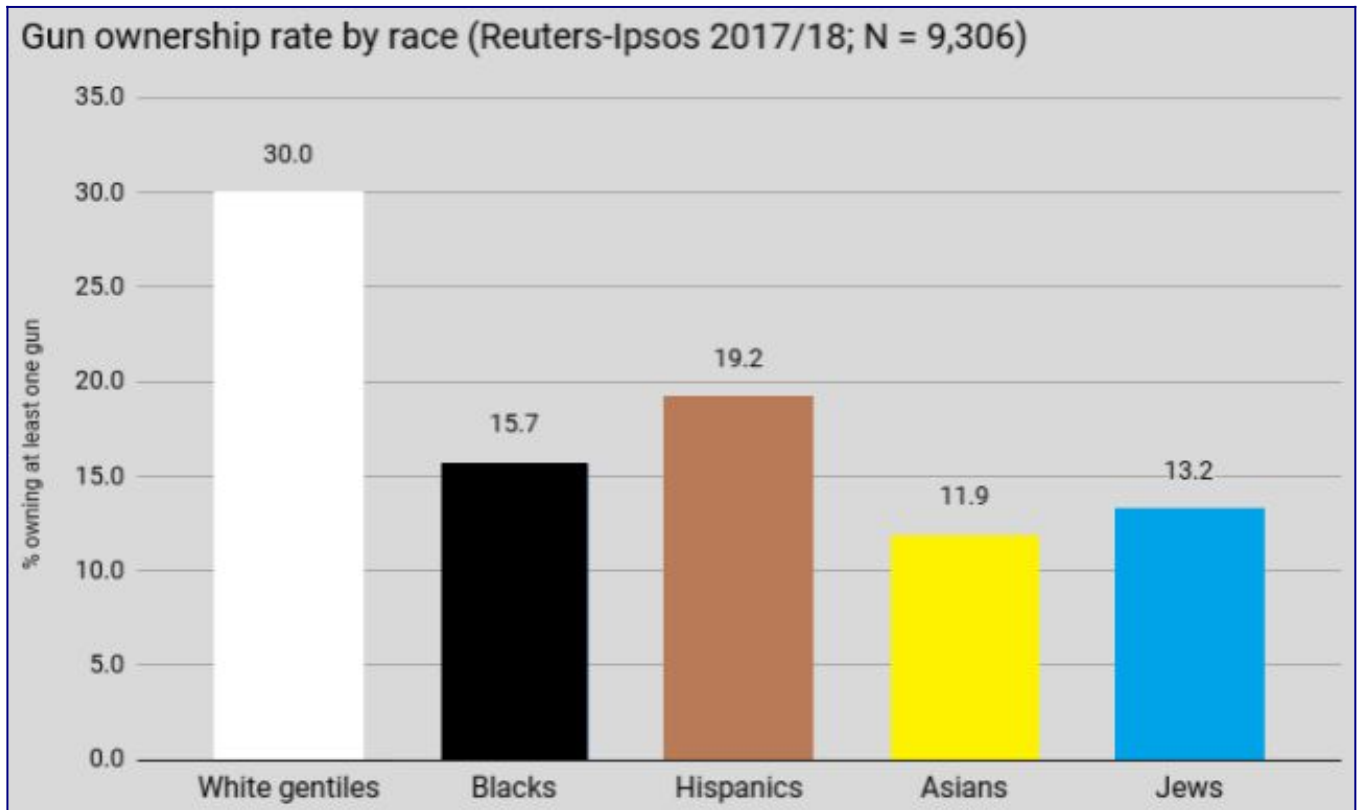

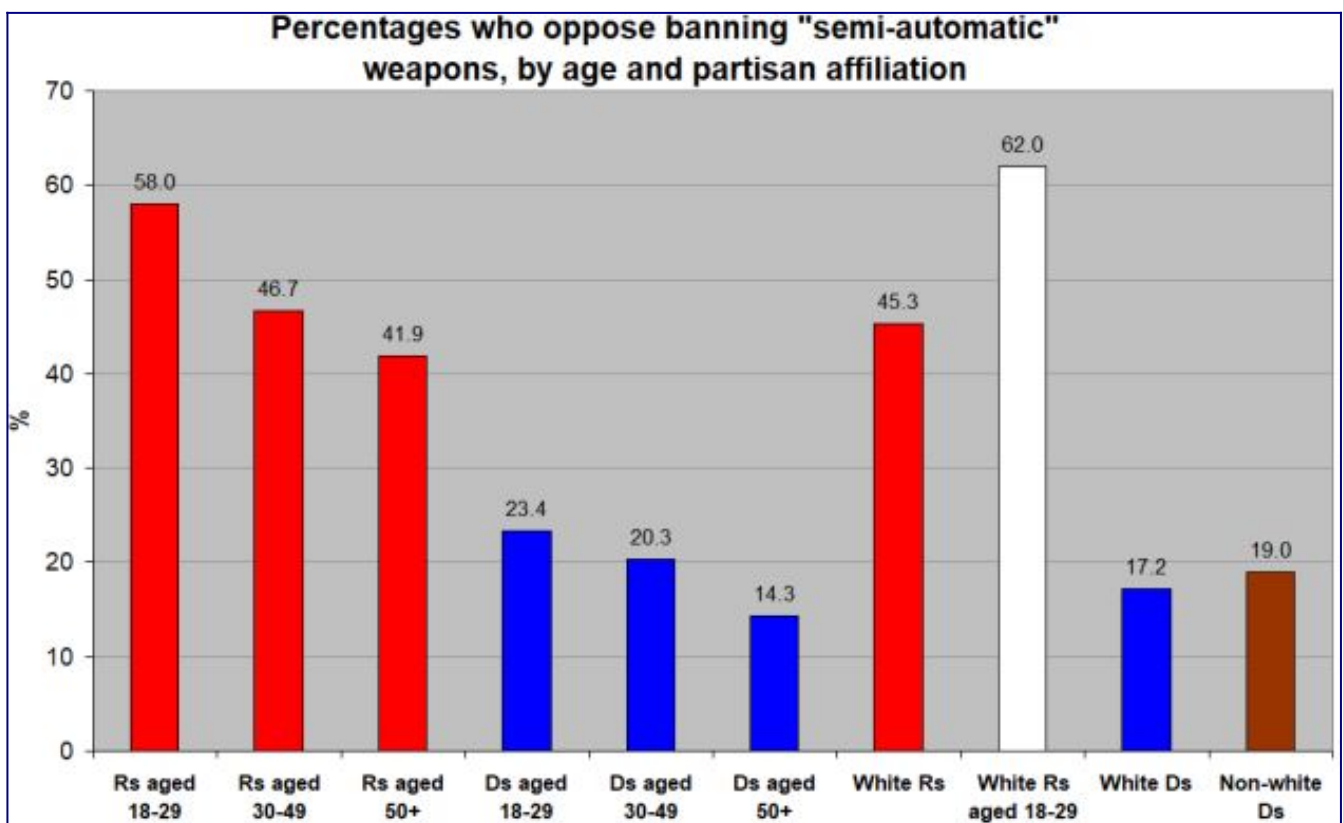

Homicide increase in the UK also correlates with diversity increase.

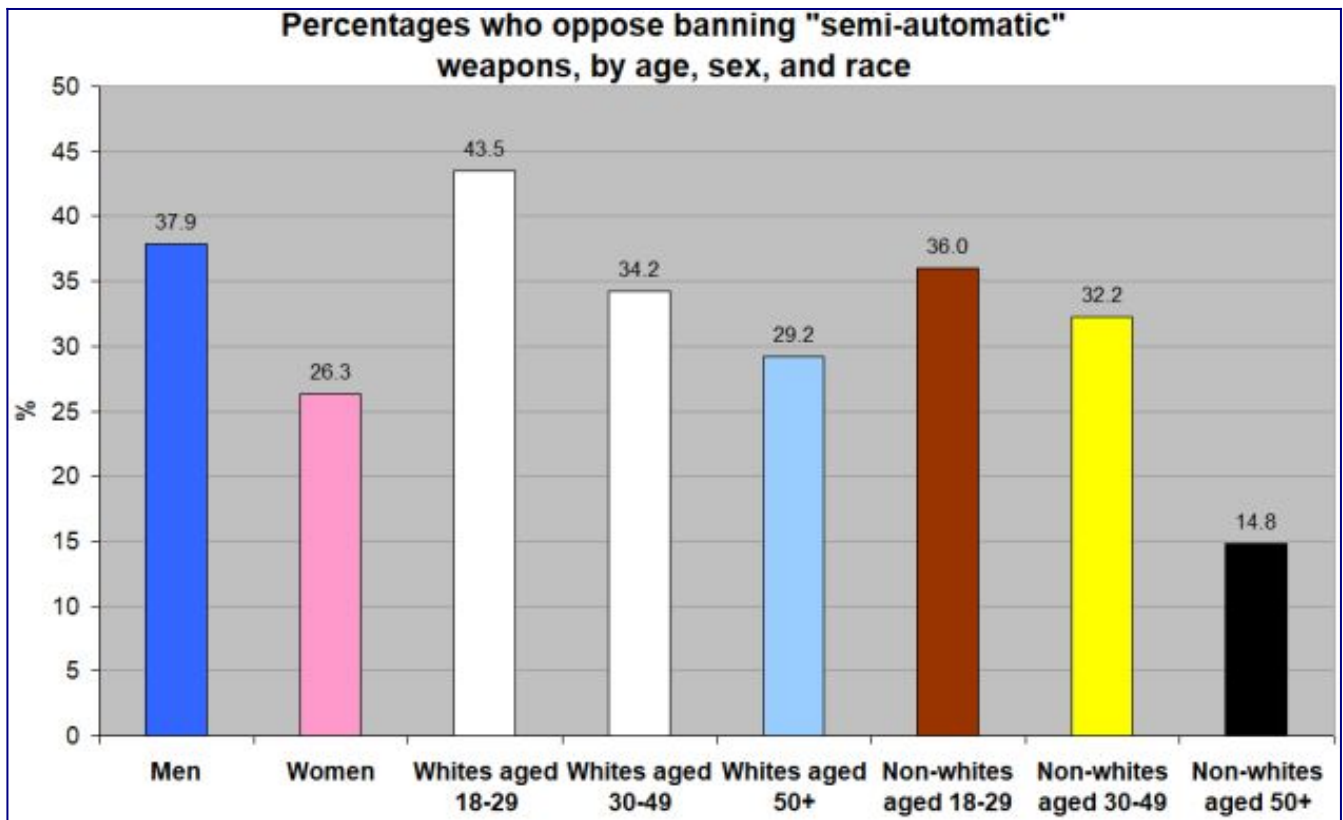

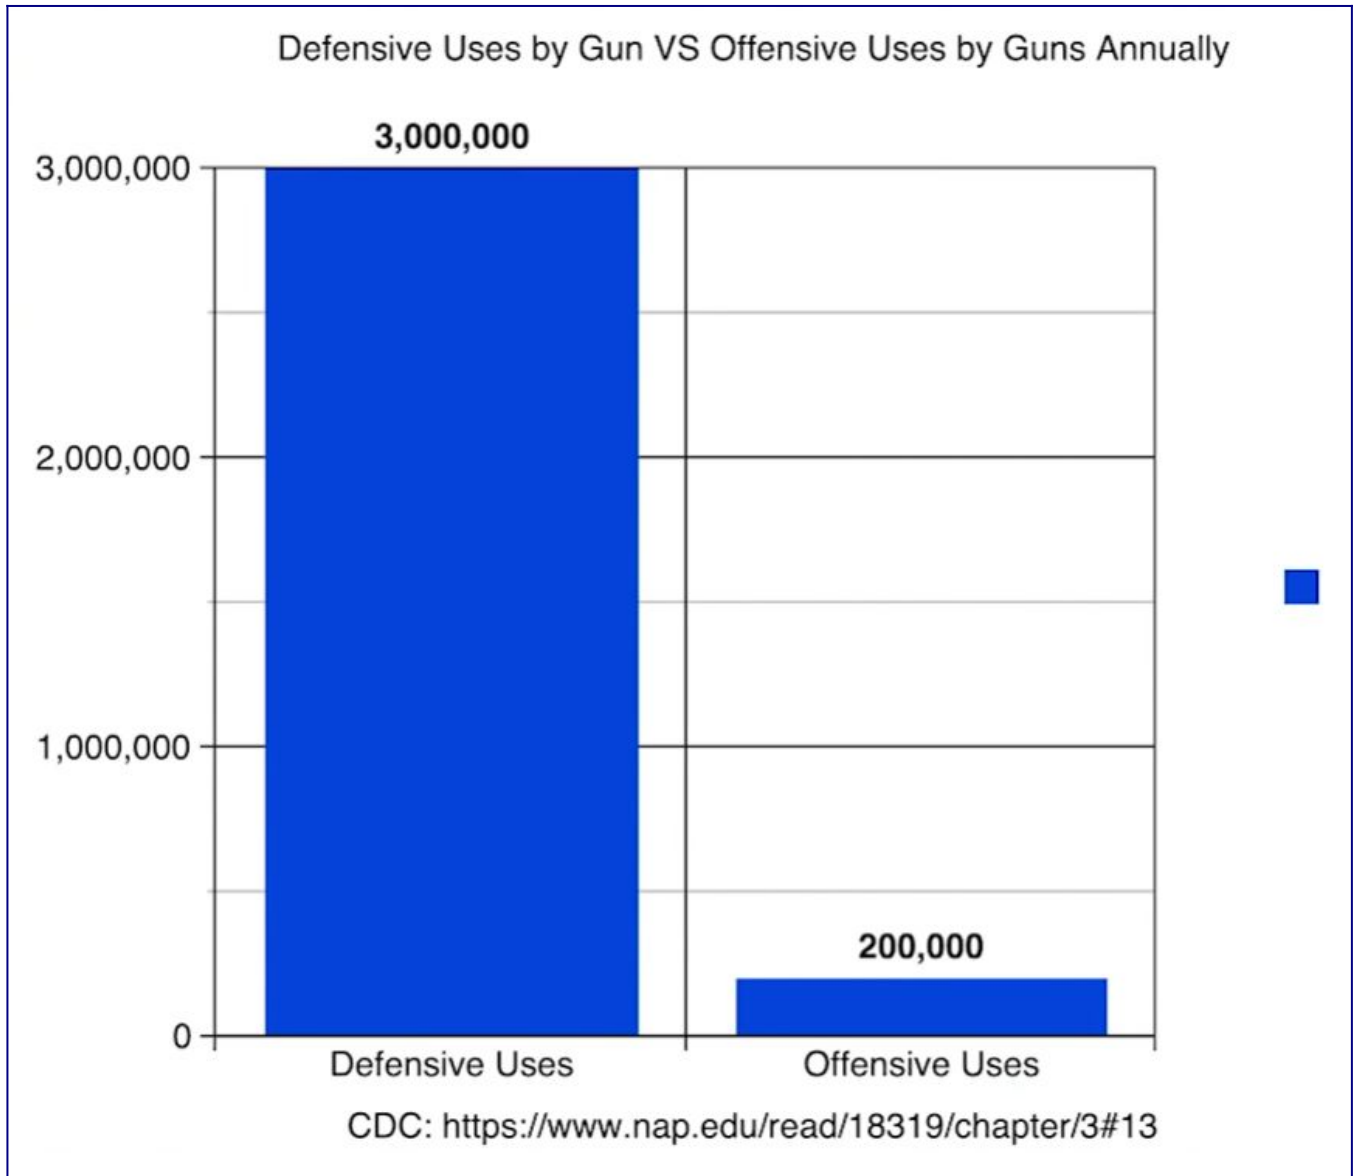

US Whites own the most guns (but commit the least gun crime).

US non-Whites most in favor of banning guns.

6) Non-Whites over-represented in mass shootings, Whites underrepresented

Mass Shooters 2019

Every person charged with or arrested for shooting 4+ people in a single incident

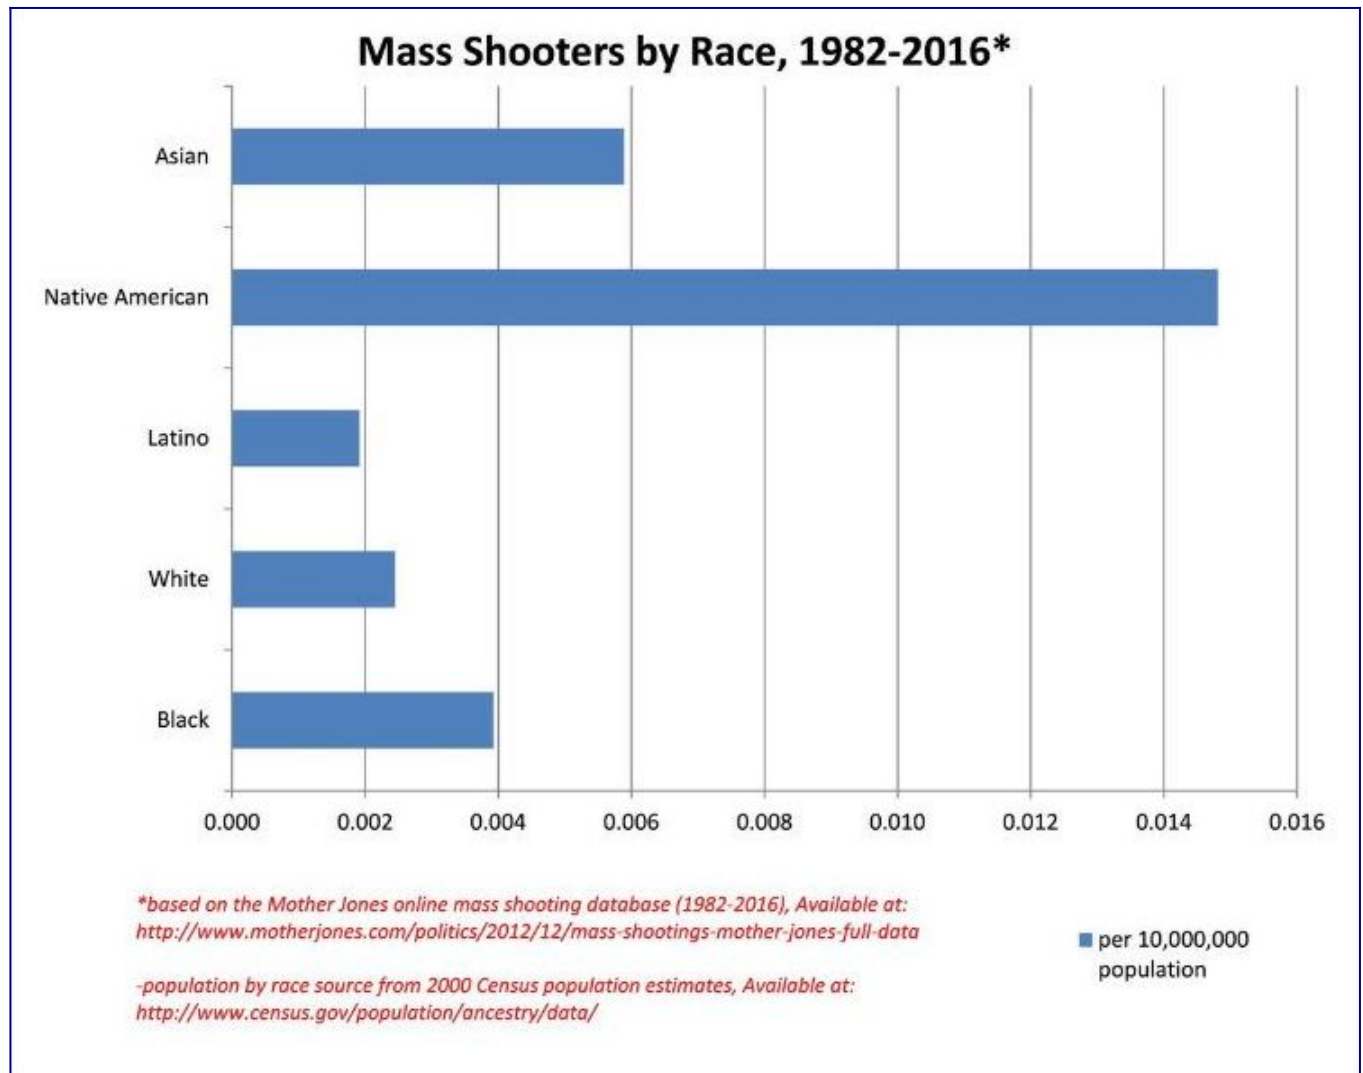

Note: 146 Mass shootings so far this year are unsolved.
Of these, 16 suspects have been identified as black or Latino and 0 white.
The remaining cases have no suspect description issued.

Also, of the 146 unsolved mass shootings so far, 21 are in Chicago, 8 are in Baltimore, 7 are in Washington DC, and 6 are in Philadelphia.

All of this is according to my personal research which consisted of googling every single incident on the wikipedia page for mass shootings and reading local news articles about them. If I'm wrong about something give me the up-to-date information.

- The Beltway snipers were included.
- For incidents involving more than one attacker (i.e., Columbine, Beltway, and San Bernardino) the assailants were separated and considered individually.

12) Racial bias in policing

US Blacks are arrested at the same rate they commit crime and, on a per capita basis, Blacks are killed by police less frequently than Whites, despite committing more violent crime and shooting at the police more often. If anything, non-Whites are under policed in most Western countries.

“Systemic racism” is a myth that was fabricated by anti-White leftist academics, such as the Marxists of the Rockefeller-funded New School and Frankfurt School. 50% of the leadership of the Frankfurt School consisted of CIA and KGB agents, and the New School awarded George Soros multiple honorary doctoral degrees. Students of both Schools co-authored the United Nation’s various statements on race, discrimination, hate speech, etc. Learn more about Critical Race Theory here.

Data source: FBI, National Incident-Based Reporting System

In crimes that involve direct contact with victims and in which the race of the offender can therefore be clearly identified, black arrest rates are below reported offender rates. For example, blacks were identified as 73% of robbery offenders, but accounted for only 59% of robbery arrests. When crimes from all categories are aggregated, black offenders were 14% less likely than non-black offenders to be arrested. This suggests that police do not show anti-black bias, but make arrests that closely match the proportions at which people of different races commit crime.

For every 10,000 black people arrested for violent crime, 3 are killed

For every 10,000 white people arrested for violent crime, 4 are killed

I'm going to keep tweeting this until someone can explain to me how this is possible if there is truly pervasive racial bias in policing

"Use total pop!"
"Use all crimes!"

Listen. I am showing that when you control for violent crime rate, the disparity vanishes. That means that whatever disparity exists in total pop or total arrests is not due to race.

Leonydus Johnson @LeonydusJohnson · Jun 1

If there is no bias when comparing violent crime arrests vs killed, how can you possibly claim racial bias anywhere else without examining 3rd and 4th variables?

Killings vs arrest of violent crime suspects is where we should see the MOST bias if police are killing black people.

75 974 5.5K

Leonydus Johnson @LeonydusJohnson · Jun 1

This thinking is incorrect but I'm seeing it a lot. The point is to control for violent crime rate because the hypothesis here is the violent crime rate is what causes the disparity, not racial bias. The fact that the disparity disappears supports that

Jacques De La Trades @therealmdp_ · Jun 1

Replying to @LeonydusJohnson

Because if you wanted to show the disparity you'd look at the deaths per every 10,000 NONVIOLENT crimes

156 696 3.7K

Leonydus Johnson @LeonydusJohnson · Jun 2

One more point. Some are saying, "but what about non-violent crime."

The deaths include ALL shooting deaths. Presumably, police consider anyone they shoot (rightly or wrongly) to be a violent crime suspect. I realize that doesn't include George Floyd but that doesn't matter.

94 388 2.3K

Leonydus Johnson @LeonydusJohnson · Jun 2

The point is that when you stack all shooting deaths up against violent crime arrests, there is no significant disparity between races. And white people are actually slightly more likely to be killed.

I still haven't heard a good explanation for this.

SUBJECT RACE

Source: NYPD ANNUAL FIREARMS DISCHARGE REPORT 2012 (<http://archive.vn/e917c>)

The race of a crime suspect is determined by eyewitness reports, usually that of the victim. The race of a subject is determined by the officer who encountered or arrested the subject. This determination may be based on a subject's self-identification, existing government-issued documentation, racial/ethnic physical characteristics, or other factors.

Although 25% of the City's population is Black, among all criminal shooting suspects identified by race Citywide in 2012, 77% were Black, and 74% of shooting victims were Black. Blacks were similarly represented as subjects in ID-AC incidents in 2012; 34 (74%) were Black. Among subjects who were armed with firearms during ID-AC incidents, 75% were Black (Figure 2.13), and among subjects who fired at officers, 79% were Black (Figure 2.16).

The race of subjects involved in ID-AC incidents corresponds to the race of subjects involved in criminal shootings (see Figure 25). Similarly, victims of criminal shootings tend to come from the same communities as the suspects. Among criminal-shooting victims identified by race in New York City in 2015, 73% were black, 13% were Hispanic, 9% were white, and 4% were Asian or other.
